

International Sociological Association

Research Committee on Sociology of Communication, Knowledge and Culture RC14

NEWSLETTER intermediate issue/ Summer 2016

Olivier Chantraine. Newsletter Editor –ochantraine@dbmail.com

The Newsletter Fall 2016 being in preparation, here follow some news concerning forthcoming activities. In the frame of ISA Vienna Forum, « The Futures we want », RC14 planned its participation to two international conferences. In order to inform all members in due time of these midterm activities of RC14, the present SPECIAL SUMMER ISSUE is dedicated exclusively to the call for papers and presentation of these conferences, which will be held in New-Delhi (India) and Haifa (Israel). We precede with the Haifa event as the deadline for submission approaches (for our members: end of July 2016).

1 International Conference in Haifa:

The Representation of the Relationship between Center and Periphery in the Contemporary Novel (University of Haifa, May 22nd-23rd 2017)

Call for papers

The notion of the relationship between center and periphery, like that of physical space, which derives from the geographical domain, has entered the literary field. Difficult to define, these terms are relative concepts distinguishable by the gap between them. It is this gap that we intend to explore in its representation in the contemporary novel, based on a comparative perspective through various cultural and linguistic lenses.

In recent decades, the relationship between center and periphery has been strongly represented in literatures of various linguistic and cultural roots. Writers "travel" in the urban periphery in spaces that are often omitted from the city community, the 'polis'. In doing so, they strengthen the opposition between the center and the suburbs that become, in fact, the agents of a symbolic redefinition of the contemporary city. The standpoint of this call for papers will not be limited to the urban space or to the simple opposition of central location versus peripheral location, but to all forms of representation of social hybridity. We will analyze the subcategories of their interdependent relationships, including power and domination between hegemony and marginality.

The concepts of restricted areas and intermediate spaces will be questioned. The perception of the human being in his spatial dimension, or even his definition in relation to space is related to the question of otherness, one of the major subjects of contemporary philosophy.

Some routes of inquiry

While focusing on works in the light of center-periphery relationship, we will examine the fluctuations between hegemony and marginalization, loneliness and otherness, omission and denial, vacuum and excess.

How is the solitude of peripheries expressed? Often used as a synonym for isolation but also for abandonment and exclusion, solitude is inherent to thought. However, it is not only the solitude of the reclusive genius, it is also that of the rootless, the wandering, both gone and eager to return to reside among their fellow human beings.

How is marginality manifested? Defined as a deviation from a center, its position generally refers to a center from which it is banned, it always relates to a specific society as a figure of lack and absence or loss.

We will focus on an identification and classification of spaces in order to try to understand their function in relation to the thematic strategy of the novel. It would be useful, for example, to define the function of certain symbolic sites in urban spaces such as the café, the restaurant, the street; or private spaces such as the apartment or the kitchen; or some meeting places for "marginal" people - places generally reserved for women, nursing homes, psychiatric hospitals, etc.

The passageway, the transitional place from a peripheral area, whether geographic, communal, sociological or other, to a more or less hospitable central space, is always dangerous. It inevitably leads to a change, evidenced by the concepts of emptiness, forgetfulness, excess, that produce particular rituals or confined or institutionalized behaviors, consequences of a refusal to face reality.

The main objective will be to identify the textual representation of the challenge of Center and Periphery as well as their role and significance in the diegesis. Thus, a new light on the contemporary novel could be offered to literary specialists.

*Proposals, in the form of a half-page summary (in French or English) should be submitted to the organizers of the symposium:

Ruth Amar: ramar@research.haifa.ac.il, Françoise Saquer-Sabin : fsaquer-sabin@nordnet.fr before July 31st 2016 (extended deadline for RC14 networks).

The answer of the scientific committee will be communicated to the authors on October 1, 2016.

Presentations should not exceed 20 minutes Presentation languages: English (preferably) or French.

Organizers: Ruth Amar, University of Haifa (Israel). Department of Hebrew and Comparative Literature; Françoise Saquer-Sabin, University of Lille, Humanities and Social Sciences (France)

Scientific Committee: Nitza Ben-Dov (Haifa), Dennis Sobolev (Haifa), Larisa Fialkova (Haifa) Silvia Adler (Bar Ilan), Martine Benoit (Lille 3), Stéphane Chaudier(Lille 3), Michèle Tauber (Paris 3), Maxime Decout (Lille 3)

2 –International Conference in New Delhi, February 26th, 27th and 28th, 2017

Theme: Globalization, New Communication Technologies and Social Transformation: Strategies for the Future

Deadlines: date for submission of abstract of the paper: 30 November, 2016

Date of Registration: 15 October to 31 January 2017 Dates of Interim Conference: 26, 27, 28 February 2017

Organizing Committee: Prof. V. P. Singh etdrvps@gmail.com; Prof. Parvez Abbasi parvezabbasi@yahoo.co.in;

WISHING YOU A VERY PLEASANT SUMMER!